

WORST FLOOD IN HISTORY OF THE OHIO VALLEY REACHES NATIONAL CATASTROPHE AS DISASTER CONTINUES TO TAKE LIFE TOLL

Waters Continue to Mount, Now at 78.3-Foot Stage — 15 Square Miles of Cincinnati Submerged, With 65,000 Homeless — Large Section of Louisville Also Under Muddy Swirl — Fires Add To the Tragedy.

(By International News Service)

The worst flood in the history of the Ohio Valley developed into a national catastrophe today, as disaster followed disaster along a 1500-mile strip of stricken territory.

Rain continued to pelt the gored rivers that have already engulfed whole towns and large sections of cities, driving an estimated 400,000 people from their homes. At least 50 are reported to have lost their lives, and uncounted millions of dollars of damage has been done.

At Louisville, Kentucky, and Cincinnati, Ohio, large portions of both towns were lying under the muddy swirl of water. A dozen smaller towns along the Ohio and its tributaries also were flooded.

Fire heaped additional worry on Cincinnati, when a three-mile strip in the flooded industrial section burst into flames. A broken oil tank had spread a layer of oil over the water, and it was ignited. Flames 300 feet high shot into the air and for a time threatened a large portion of the city. The blaze was brought under control with $1,500,000 damage.

But the water, meanwhile, continued its mount, and today was at a 78.3-foot stage, but saw the highest in history. Almost 15 square miles of the city was submerged and 65,000 homeless.

The situation at Louisville was that of a war-torn city. The power plant failed at midnight, and relief was badly hampered for the 200,000 refugees, as the town was forced to resort to candle and kerosene lamps for light.

Meanwhile, half of Louisville's 42 square miles was under water, and Mayor Neville Miller begged all women and children to flee the city while they still had a chance.

At nearby Frankfort, prisoners rioted in the over-crowded reformatory, as the flood lapped at their ankles on the second tier. The prison was almost completely isolated from communication, and reports developed widely as to the seriousness of the outbreak.

The crest at Cincinnati and Louisville was not expected for another 24 to 48 hours, and meanwhile, additional rains increased it.

National guardsmen and soldiers patrolled Louisville, with the order to shoot to kill any looters.

President Roosevelt in Washington ordered five Federal agencies to co-operate with the Red Cross in relieving suffering. Battalions of relief workers were dispatched to key points by the Red Cross, as it appealed to the nation for a $2,000,000 flood relief fund.

Coast Guardsmen crews from a score of lake cities and from the eastern coast were in the stricken area aiding in rescue work.

New Flood Crest of 34 and 35 Feet Outlook For Pittsburgh Today

(By International News Service)

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 25—A new flood with a crest of between 34 and 35 feet, today was promised Pittsburgh for early tomorrow, by W. S. Brotzman, United States Weather Forecaster, as heavy rains sent the rivers rising again. After a brief fall, the muddy rivers rose today to more than 30 feet, 5 feet past the 25 foot flood stage.

Brotzman predicted more rain for today, although he held out some hope for colder weather tonight. A 35 foot stage will render hundreds of families homeless and result in considerable damage downtown in the "golden triangle" business section.

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 25—(INS)—Re-nented rainfall that fell with monotonous regularity today sent flood waters on the rise once more here today after a brief fall.

From a crest of 32.9 feet, 7.9 feet above flood level, the waters fell to 27.9 feet Sunday but new rains sent them spurring to 2.92 feet early today with a 30-foot crest predicted.

Rain fell over the entire Western Pennsylvania watershed and more was predicted for today although some hope was expressed by W. S. Brotzman, U. S. weather forecaster, for colder weather tonight.

Several hundred families being cared for at public refuges were attempting to clean the mud and debris from their flooded homes and at the same time remained prepared to flee in the event the new rise continued beyond present calculations.

Downtown streets were lined with gasoline pumps drawing the yellow flood waters from basements of buildings. Emergency shelters were still being used in Sharpsburg, McKees Rocks and sections of the northside of the city. Where possible, streets were being cleaned.

In grateful appreciation for the aid of other communities when it was so sorely stricken last March, Pittsburgh led the state in gathering money and supplies for the flood ravaged communities downstream. A clearing house was established to gather food, bedding, boats and other supplies. Mayor Cornelius D. Scully appealed

Rioting Breaks Out Among Terrorized Convicts in Kentucky

(By International News Service)

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 25—Rioting broke out among terrorized convicts in the Kentucky State Reformatory at Frankfort, Kentucky, when flood waters lapped at the second tier of cells last night, but was under control today, according to a report telephoned here.

The warden's office denied in a conversation with International News Service, that any of the convicts had been slain. Earlier reports said two or more were killed in the riot.

SHAWNEETOWN, Ill., Jan. 25—The United States Ship Vandenberg, today carried residents of this flood afflicted city, isolated for nearly a week, to safety.

Evacuation of the city was completed as the rampaging Ohio River rose to new high. Many hundreds, huddled for days in public buildings, were reported ill.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Jan. 25—Orders against striking of matches were given today in the inundated sections by authorities, following the death of two persons and several injured.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Jan. 25—For the first time in its long history, the Louisville Courier-Journal and Times suspended publication today. The publishers bowed to the mayor's desire to conserve power, even before electricity was shut off at midnight.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Jan. 25 — (INS)—An undetermined number of prisoners were reported slain early today in a wild riot at the flooded State Reformatory here.

There were rumors that at least 15 had been killed, but other sources held the number of dead at "a few."

The reformatory was virtually isolated from the outside world and little or no direct information could be obtained.

The disorder was reported to have started as the prisoners became panic stricken with the flood waters lapping

"Pennies From Heaven" At Grand for Two Nights

There's happiness ahead at the Grand Theatre, where Bing Crosby's latest picture, Columbia's "Pennies From Heaven," is due tonight and Tuesday. A cast that includes Madge Evans, Edith Fellows, Donald Meek and Louis Armstrong, famed king of swing, works along with Bing in the film.

The story concerns a vagabond troubadour who falls in with a little girl and her improvident grandfather and proceeds to take them under his somewhat patched-up wing. The child is about to be sent to an orphanage and the elderly man to an Old People's Home when the troubadour hits upon a plan to make enough money for all three of them to live on.

The county welfare worker who is responsible for the child, happens to be just the type of girl the troubadour can love, and he finds himself doing it thoroughly. However, they are on opposite sides of the fence, hence complications. Things manage to work out for the best along toward the end of the picture, after meriment, romance and music take turns with the entertainment.

Bristol Red Cross Appeals for Aid For Flood Sufferers

Admiral Cary T. Grayson issued this morning a most urgent plea for the flood-stricken area.

"Conditions are much worse than anyone can imagine," states Admiral Grayson, in his message to local Red Cross workers.

Money is needed. Trucks are needed, and will be transported free of charge to the area.

Volunteers are needed. Send names to Mrs. Joseph Smith, 329 Radcliffe street, Bristol.

Non-perishable food is needed. Grocers are asked to place in their stores, boxes to receive donations.

The Bristol district chairman of the American Red Cross, Mrs. Joseph Smith, has received a 50-word telegram telling of the great need for assistance of the flood sufferers in the stricken district of the Middle West.

Mrs. Smith desires to have each one of the roll call workers assist in collecting donations to relieve those unfortunate persons who have lost everything they possessed. The local chairman says: "Only one who has viewed the destruction which flood waters accomplish, wiping out in a few minutes the hard work and savings of a lifetime of those in its path, know the tragedy of such; and the appeal for donations to relieve the terrible suffering of those destitute should at once be responded to by everyone, no matter what the amount of the donation. If you cannot call on the ones mentioned below, advise them and they will call on you. It is hoped the Bristol district will respond generously in this dire crisis, and assist in giving comfort of food and clothing to those who so sadly

TWO BALD-HEADED MEN ARGUE OVER COMBS

By "The Stroller"

Two bald-headed men had a stiff argument the other day in a well-known Bristol office over the theft of combs.

It appears that one of the men had by some means, either fair or foul, come into the possession of a considerable number of small combs such as are handy to carry in one's pocket. The collection was placed in the office of the individual who intended to distribute them among his friends, at a later date. He perhaps knew, that he himself would have very little or no use for a comb. So he just laid them aside until he could hand them out as gifts to his friends.

The second bald-headed man sat there and saw the combs and when they disappeared in rather a mysterious manner, he was accused of taking them.

"Why should I take your combs? I don't need them," was the reply of the one accused. And so it continued back and forth. But still the combs are missing.

JOHN W. SIMONS WILL GO ON TRIAL FOR SHOOTING LAD

Case Against Bensalem Twp. Farmer Scheduled for Today In Philadelphia

HAVE TWO WITNESSES

Defendant Contends Shooting of George Doble, 19, Was Accidental

There is listed for trial today in Philadelphia John W. Simons, Jr., 49, Red Lion and Knights Road, Andalusia, who is charged with fatally shooting George Watson Doble, 19, 7164 Wissinoming street, Philadelphia.

The alleged shooting took place on the Simons farm on November 11th, when Doble, it is said, accompanied by Frank Lang, 21, 7154 Wissinoming street, Philadelphia, were hunting. It was stated at the time that Doble killed some of Simons' pigeons and that this resulted in Simons chasing Doble off the place. The two men dashed across the creek on the dividing line of the property and engaged in a tussle. Doble was almost instantly killed.

Anderson R. Cokle and Francis Cokle, Philadelphia, are said to have been witnesses to part of the affair.

Simons was arrested immediately by Bucks County Detective Anthony Russo who was accompanied to the scene by Chief of Police Linford J. Jones, of Bristol.

Simons contends that the shooting was accidental and was the result of the falling of the gun.

A 10-year old boy was struck by an automobile on the Lincoln Highway at South Langhorne Saturday evening at about seven o'clock and severely injured.

West sustained a broken right leg, lacerations of the chin and face and abrasions about the head.

The injured boy was taken to the first-aid station of the Bucks County Rescue Squad at Parkland and given first-aid. He was then later removed to the Abington Hospital.

No arrests were made. Corporal Evans of the State Highway Patrol investigated the case.

Two Have Pockets Picked While Attending Services At Perkase Sunday School

PERKASIE, Jan. 25—Pickpockets invaded the Trinity Lutheran Sunday School here, a few days ago and got away with approximately $50. Some of the victims were T. A. Crouthamel, president of the Perkase Trust Company and Justice of Peace Mahlon Keller. So it is easy to see that the pick-pockets were no respecter of persons.

Crouthamel, after returning from the church services found that his purse was missing. He inserted an advertisement in a local paper.

The next morning Crouthamel found that Keller had also missed his purse. Members of the Sunday school recalled having seen several strangers at the session and it was also recalled that these strangers exhibited a distinct inclination to evade those who greeted them as strangers. William Krout approached the strangers with a word of greeting, but both men faintly acknowledged the greeting, as they turned and walked away.

It is believed the strangers operated as the large crowd in Sunday School was dismissed and passed down the stairway and through the corridor toward the main exit where scores at the same time were entering to attend the dedicatory services of the parish house.

Mr. Keller remembers that he was rather roughly jostled in the crowd, but paid little attention to the matter until he missed his purse, which contained nearly $50. Mr. Crouthamel had several dollars, together with auto cards and licenses and a check in his purse.

Several years ago at the dedicatory services of St. John's Lutheran Church, Richlandtown, half a dozen men had their pockets picked.

WHY A BILL OF RIGHTS?

Senator George W. Norris, veteran insurgent of the Senate, is to preside at a conference to devise means of broadening federal power over industry and agriculture, either through amendment of the Constitution or through nullifying the Supreme Court's authority as a tribunal of last resort. The sponsoring group which invited Norris to preside includes Edwin S. Smith of the national labor relations board; Henry T. Hunt, interior department lawyer; W. Jett Lauck, legal adviser to John L. Lewis, and Morris L. Ernst, counsel for the American Civil Liberties Union.

A brochure explaining the purpose of the conference says: "If the power of the Supreme Court to invalidate such legislation is within the control of Congress, then the mandate is that Congress strip the court of such power. If the power of the court to invalidate acts of Congress is granted by the Constitution and the court now declares such legislation to be beyond the power of Congress and of the states, then the mandate is for amendment of the Constitution."

This quotation offers an excellent illustration of the cloudy thinking and muddled emotions animating most of the doctrinaires who would incapacitate the Federal judiciary for performance of its constitutional functions. They persist in talking of the "power to invalidate acts of Congress" as if it were a specific veto power which could be transferred from the court to some other branch of government or abolished altogether.

The Supreme Court never has vetoed and cannot veto an act of Congress, as such. When Congress enacts a statute which the court deems unconstitutional, the court can do nothing about it unless and until a specific case, involving an individual's constitutional rights, is carried to it on appeal. NRA offered an illustration. That law was no more constitutional in 1933 than in 1935, but it remained in operation for two years until, in the Schechter decision, the Supreme Court set aside the conviction of individuals prosecuted for violation of an NRA code. The court ruled that the Schechters' constitutional rights had been invaded. The decision, concurred in by all nine justices, "conservative" and "liberal" alike, made it clear that further NRA prosecutions would be futile; and NRA fell of its own unlawful weight.

Obviously, Congress cannot take away by arbitrary statute the Supreme Court power exercised in cases like the foregoing, unless Congress wants to take the responsibility of enacting a statute designed to nullify the constitutional provision for a Federal court of last resort. As for hamstringing the Supreme Court by constitutional amendment: Such an amendment, to be effective, would have to be drastic enough to close the court to all citizens seeking redress for disregard of their constitutional prerogatives. Do Senator Norris, Mr. Ernst et al want that?
If so, why keep the Bill of Rights in the Constitution?

Without the script in hand, we would surmise that this Mr. Bar-rymore's month to chase Arlel.

A court in Moscow has just seen to it that the drunk driver of a death car was shot the other 50 per cent.

ropes finally caught between the knives, which prevented the wheels from revolving. The mules dragged the machine a considerable distance, although their progress was impeded by the wheels dragging. Finally the young man ran them into a fence, when they stopped. It was with great difficulty that he maintained his balance, in their mad career about the field. Several persons looked on in breathless silence, momentarily expect-event he would have been crushed to death or cut to pieces.

Staking Their Lives on a Look at the Waters

Residents of Shippenport, Ky., a suburb of Louisville, risk their lives to gaze at the waters rushing under the 26th Street Bridge. Under ordinary conditions the river, now almost level with the floor of the bridge, is forty feet below the roadway. Note the half-submerged house in the background.

Sandbags for the Wabash River Levees

Farmers and WPA workers toil hourly to bring sandbags for the weakening levees along the Wabash River at Vincennes, Ind., where the usually peaceful river is forcing hundreds from their homes. Red Cross and the Coast Guard are rushing aid into the threatened sections.

Enforced Moving Day In Louisville Flood Area

These flood victims, forced from their homes at Louisville, Ky., are only a few of the thousands threatened as the Ohio River rushes over its banks. Coast Guard lifeboats are evacuating all persons endangered while more rain raises the swollen river.

"LUXURY" MODEL "by MAY CHRISTIE

CHAPTER XVII

"Don't let's talk of me. I want to hear all about yourself. Where are you living?" Mrs. Vandaveer asked Jimmy.

"On Elizabeth street. Down in Greenwich Village. Elizabeth street used to be a fashionable residential street several decades ago. It's shabby now."

"But full of atmosphere," she supplemented. "I suppose you have a studio?"

"Of sorts. More of an attic with a good-sized skylight. But it suffices."

Mrs. Vandaveer clasped her hands dramatically together. He noticed she had beautiful, slim hands, extraordinarily white. An effect produced by hand cream carefully applied after every washing, and by sleeping in rubber gloves nightly that were fairly lined with tissue creams—but he was not to know that.

"I would adore seeing your studio.
Would you think it a bother if I dropped in some afternoon to look at your work?"

What could he say but that he would be glad to see her, although he was afraid she would not think much of his abode?

"But I'm mad about artists. I mean"—she corrected herself quickly—"I'm enormously interested in creative work. Over in Paris I've loads of friends who are painters and writers and sculptors, and some of them live in the Latin Quarter." A delightful memory came back to her. "I even had a studio once in Montparnasse where I hoped I'd do things. But I'm afraid I didn't accomplish much."

Which was an understatement.
Unknown to her husband Joel, who was residing with her in Paris at the time on the fashionable Champs Elysees, Lorraine had done plenty in her Latin Quarter studio, on the sly.

There had been the young painter, Raoul Destouches.

Then Anton Karisloff, the Russian sculptor.

How fierce but how wonderfully had Anton made love!

"I may be going over to Paris very shortly," said Jimmy Randolph eagerly, "because the School of Architectural Design in New York often makes an exchange of students on a short summer course. Three or four French students come over here, you know, and New York ones take their place."

"But how wonderful! I may be going over shortly!" Lorraine gave him the full benefit of her beautiful jade eyes. "I usually go over to Paris for the late Spring race-meetings. Paris is romantic as a dream in the merry month of May. It would be fun to see Paris together, wouldn't it?" She smiled at him under her long thick lashes, and he had the curious, breathless sensation of drowning in shining green pools of light.

Luana Waters quickly gained the reputation of being New York's loveliest model.

Her success was amazing for an unknown girl. Needless to say, it aroused plenty of jealousy among the other mannequins in the House of Quackenbush.

Success brings envy and backbiting, and all the more so where beauty is involved.

The pick of the big social functions in the well-known "little season" fell to Luana. Mr. Quackenbush was shrewd. He wished his loveliest and most talked-of model to appear at all the newest and smartest haunts and nightclubs where the rich foreigners, dressed in his most exquisite creations.

She must appear, too, at the big charity balls, and at the smart race meetings. Indeed, everywhere that le monde qui s'amuse is found.

Luana soon grew accustomed to it, and lost some of her shyness, as was natural. What 19-year-old girl would fail to enjoy making a stir in expensive and exclusive places, secure in the knowledge that she was groomed and coiffured and dressed and shod exquisitely, and that the eyes of innumerable women—and men too—attractive, important men about town—were turned on her ad-miringly? It was dazzling to a girl who had been kept short of money all her nineteen years, and whose existence had been almost that of the convent in its seclusion.

Arrayed in a dazzling gown, Luana would appear at the side of Adolphe Quackenbush on the opening night of plays—or perhaps her new friend, Jimmy Randolph, would be her escort.

Though Jimmy enjoyed the theater, he did not enjoy having his expensive ticket donated by Luana—or rather, by the House of Quackenbush. He resented that.

Which was foolish of him, as Luana often told him, but she was up against the well-known pride of a Southerner.

"I simply have to have an escort,
Jimmy," she would tell him. "Mr.
Quackenbush is busy, and if you won't come with me, I'll have to go to the show with that detestable, oily little Armand!"

Luana heartily disliked the right-hand man of Mr. Quackenbush. Besides, was he not Yvonne's boyfriend?

The other girls might be jealous of her, but not so Yvonne. Or so Luana imagined.

That Yvonne, for reasons of politess, was capable of hiding her real feelings under a gushing appearance of affection for the girl who paid half the rent of her apartment, and who obligingly absented herself on Armand's calling nights, was something Luana had not reckoned with.

Nor was Luana aware that Yvonne in her heart resented the fact that she was in the position of loved the man who had gone through a mean, less marriage ceremony with her in Yuma, Arizona. She shuddered when she thought of its sequel in San Diego, when Gerald had been arrested.

Her one fear now was that the successful, much-talked-of young model, Luana Waters, might be linked any day in the newspapers with the erstwhile Elizabeth Harmon!

Mr. Quackenbush insisted on publicity, and the more the better, from the point of view of his business.

At the Spring meet of the United Hunts Association on Long Island
she was repeatedly photographed.
During an al fresco luncheon in the famous Turf and Field Club at the same place, the press photographers were busy with their cameras, and Luana had as much attention in her smart racing clothes as the best-

"I would adore to see your studio," said Mrs. Vandaveer. "Would you think it a bother if I dropped in some afternoon?"

recipient of the crumbs that figuratively fell from Luana's table, in the way of theater tickets, invitations to balls and parties, and smart functions, and fetes for charity.

Behind her back, Yvonne seldom lost a chance of belittling Luana to Armand, and even lying about her.

"She is as deep as the sea. Ze steell waters run deep. If she is so good, so prop-aire, why she pick up a young man on ze roof-tops? The nights I go out, he come in and is alone with her for hours and hours. Armand, it is my belief shees young Jeemy Randolph is her lov-a-ge!"

Armand fully believed it. Nothing would give him greater pleasure than to cut Jimmy out.

He believed, too, that Luana was merely coquetting with him when she repulsed him. Not that he had ever had a chance to put her to the test, since Yvonne had eyes like the proverbial hawk, and was jealous as a she-devil!

To allay any suspicions about Luana, and the amatory feeling she had roused in him, he went Yvonne one better in his belittling of the girl when she was absent.

"American women have no fire, no emotion. Seldom is a Frenchman ever happy with an American," he would unctuously announce. "The women are all spoiled and selfish.
They have no real passion."

"How clef-aire you are, Armand!
You are the clef-airest, handsomest man in New York." Yvonne would fall into his arms, secure in the knowledge that what American women lacked, she had . . . plus.

"This Luana is not really pretty.
She has a flat bosom. She has no hips."

Yvonne would beam at that. Armand was a true artist. Yvonne was crazy about him. When an ardent girl of her type loves, she can be ruthless in the chase, and woe betide anyone who comes between her and her sweetheart!

The friendship between Luana and Jimmy Randolph flourished apace.

There was no hint of love-making.
Memory of Gerald Bruton was still strong, though Luana realized perfectly that she had never really

BASKETBALL TOURNAMENT TO BE HELD IN COUNTY

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 25—Announcement was made today by the Philadelphia Suburban Sports Writers Association of which Herbert Good is president, of the amateur basketball tournament to be conducted in Bucks, Chester, Delaware and Montgomery counties for the 1937 championship of the suburban area.

Entries will be received until February 15 after which pairings will be made for the sectional tournaments to be held from March 1 to 13.

The semi-finals of the county tournaments will be held on March 15 and 16 according to the schedule planned by the scribes' basketball committee of which Wilmer D. Cressman, of the Norristown Times-Herald is chairman.

The county finals will be held on March 18.

The county finalists will meet on March 23 with the final game for the championship of the entire area on March 25.

Sectional tournaments will be held in areas where the entrants are most numerous. The county finals will be held at points most available to the teams concerned, while the semi-finals and finals will be played on neutral courts, the exact site as yet undecided.

While the complete rules for the tournament have not as yet been entirely formulated, independent amateur teams for any of the four counties are eligible to participate. Exception will be made for players who have regularly played with teams in any of these four counties, but who do not reside in said counties.

An entry fee of $2.00 will be charged to each team entering the tournament, which will entitle the entrants to be eligible for the prizes which will be awarded in the various classes. Entries will be filed with the tournament chairman or with the sports editor of the Daily Intelligencer, Doylestown.

Teams to be eligible for the tournament must have played three regular scheduled contests prior to February 15, and players submitted on the roster of each team must have played in one or more of those games.

The tournament committee is particularly interested in hearing from teams in Bristol, Morrisville, Newtown, Yardley, Doylestown, Perkasie, Sellersville and Riegelsville, or any other section. The tournament will be strictly amateur so that it will not prohibit high school players from participating after the regular schedule is completed.

Entry blanks can be secured immediately from A. Russell Thomas, Doylestown.

Wills $2,000 As Gift To National Farm School

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 25—A $2,000 gift to the endowment fund of the National Farm School, Doylestown, was contained in the will of Henry Rosenthal, president of the Industrial Cold Storage & Warehouse Co.

He lived at 1821 W. Erie avenue, and left an estate of $100,000 and upward. He directed that, pending adjudication of his estate, his widow, Mrs. Birdie M. Rosenthal, should receive $100 a week, and his daughter, Mrs. Bena R. Schless, $50 a week.

Upon final adjudication the widow is to receive all of her husband's stock in the metal firm of Joseph Rosenthal's Sons, Inc., his real estate, listed as lots in Wildwood, N. J., his mortgages and personal effects.

Mrs. Rosenthal also was bequeathed a one-third interest in a $65,000 indenture of mortgage and 174 shares of stock of Industrial Cold Storage & Warehouse Co.

The testator disposed of about $8,500 in other personal bequests. He directed that his share of the residuary estate of his late brother, Isaac, be held in trust for his daughter, Mrs. Bena R. Schless, and her children. Mrs. Schless and children are also named beneficiaries of a $50,000 trust fund out of the residuary estate. One-half of the remainder is then to be received outright by his widow, and remainder held in trust for the daughter and her children.

Mr. Rosenthal, who was 73, also headed the M. A. Young Ice Co. He was honorary president of the Philadelphia Metal Association.

Post Office Staff Here Forwarded 3,745 Forms

Employees fill in the forms at their places of employment, and sending such in in a group," stated post office officials today.

A fair percentage of forms were returned to individuals for various reasons. Some did not give complete information, on others there were discrepancies shown in ages, some printed their name instead of giving their signatures, according to local workers.

It was the duty of post office officials here to ascertain the number of employees, to distribute the application blanks to such, and see that same were filled and returned to the social security board.

Many hours of overtime work were required on the part of Bristol post office employees to care for the forms during the last part of December, in order to have all forms in the hands of the employers by the first of the year, so deductions could be made from the salaries at the beginning of 1937.

The message is given by postmaster Duffy that any employee in this vicinity who has not yet received his number or application, and who is less than 65 years of age, should make immediate application at Bristol post-office.

Employers are reminded that a form must be filed for each new employee, such being obtainable at the local post-office.

The place was without electricity last night as the powerhouse went under water and in the darkness it was believed that a number of the prisoners had escaped.

had taken place at the prison, but from vantage points outside the gates the sound of pistol shots and rifle fire could be heard regularly. Presumably only the guards have guns and whether they were firing to kill or just for intimidation could not be learned.

The inmates are being confined pending the completion of a temporary stockade on higher ground. Crews worked all night to complete the wire and wooden enclosure while the battle raged within.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Jan. 25—(INS)—Thrown into chaos by the worst flood in its history, Louisville faced even greater disaster today as the rampaging Ohio River kept on rising.

Nearly a mile of the city was under water today. More than 200,000 of the city's population of 330,000 were homeless and many suffered in dire want. Thousands were ill and others needed medical care for the effects of their exposure.

Officials were frankly desperate. Both Mayor Neville Miller and Gov. A. E. Chandler made appeals for aid directly to President Roosevelt.

The city was being operated under wartime measures with the National Guard and Regular Army forces patrolling the streets although martial law had not been officially declared.

Mayor Miller ordered complete evacuation of the town west of Fifteenth street last night and at the same time urged all women and children and men whose services were not demanded to leave the stricken city at once.

"We are not worrying about property any more," he said, "we are worrying now only about saving life."

His desperation was prompted by the inexorable rise of the river which this morning had reached a stage of nearly 55 feet, almost 13 higher than the previous mark of 42.7 feet set in 1884.

Meteorologist J. L. Kendall said he feared the crest would be at least 57 feet providing the rain ceased. His forecast for today and tomorrow, however, was for more rain and possibly snow.

A total of 2.94 inches of rain fell on the city yesterday and last night. River engineers said that every inch of rain would mean nearly a foot rise in the river.

The city's desolation was increased during the night when the power supply failed. Only valiant and death-defying effort on the part of the power workers had kept the city supplied with any electricity earlier. They were forced to work far below water level at the giant machinery and were protected only by water-tight bulkheads and were in danger of collapsing at any time. They at last gave way. The crew was believed to have escaped.

Communications were badly disrupted. Telephone service was almost at a standstill and many telegraph wires were out of commission. Trains were operating cautiously on the Pennsylvania and Southern, each string of cars packed with fear-stricken refugees.

The crisis was becoming more acute hourly as food supplies and medical stores were depleted. An epidemic of typhoid was feared because of the lack of pure drinking water.

Pneumonia cases were increasing rapidly and virtually everyone had a cold. Fifty emergency clinics were jammed beyond capacity and doctors and nurses worked without thought of rest or care for themselves.

The homeless were crowded under every available roof. Factories, hotels, the National Guard Armory, stores and shops each held their quotas.

Everyone was ordered to subsist with the most meagre supplies possible and every resource was thrown open to the needy. The mayor ordered the arrest of anyone using a boat for sightseeing. Looters were to be shot on sight.

The city was being operated under wartime measures with the National Guard and Regular Army forces pa-

Drug stores were allowed to dispose of medical supplies only. Automobiles were ordered off the streets except for public duty and gasoline was doled out in emergency rations.

There were no taxicabs or busses operating today.

over the air for financial aid for the Red Cross.

CINCINNATI, O., Jan. 25—The relentless upsurge of the Ohio River continued here today as firemen fought the last of a floating fire that had imperiled most of the city.

The blaze was brought under control late last night after doing some $1,500,000 damage in the industrial mill creek section. But only by the saving of two huge oil tanks was a much worse holocaust averted.

Flames nearly 300 feet high shot into the murky sky yesterday when a film of oil on the floodwaters became ignited. The fire spread with incredible rapidity and almost enveloped two 60,000 gallon tanks of the Standard Oil Company.

Firemen concentrated their effort on saving the tanks and at last succeeded after ten hours. The fire was still alive today but Chief Barney Houston said that the real danger was past.

The river meanwhile maintained its steady rise and early today stood at 78.3 feet about 7.5 feet above its all time high here. Officials hesitated to predict what the crest might be but believed it would be reached tomorrow or Wednesday if the rain does not resume.

The swirling waters already have driven 65,000 from their homes in the city, and about 15 square miles in the valley sections are under water.

Because so much of the city is built on higher ground there is not the dire distress here of other communities.

There are no trains entering or leaving the city itself, but stop in the suburbs fifteen miles from the heart of town from where supplies and food-stuffs are being brought in by motor.

One light plant in town was completely shut down and the other badly crippled. Authorities ordered electricity used only for emergency.

Health officials report there is no danger of an epidemic, but the number of pneumonia cases is increasing alarmingly. Plenty of food for at least a week is on hand but the water supply was shut off at 7 p. m. last night.
